FIRE ZONE IS EXTENDED SLIGHTLY

City Council Says No Wooden Buildings Are To Be Constructed In Certain Limits

An ordinance for the extension of the fire zone, further discussion of the extension of Summit avenue and Third street, and an ordinance which says that property owners shall chop all weeds in front of their holdings were the main matters taken up by the City Council in their monthly meeting at the city hall last evening.

All members of the council were present with the exception of R. R. Welles, the newly elected member. Extension of the fire zone was adopted without an opposing vote. The zone is now bounded by Collins street, Water street, Lancaster avenue, the alley between the properties of Eugene Walker and the Richmond Motor Company and Irvine street. No building is to be built between this zone except brick, concrete, steel or stone, ones with non-combustible roof.

Dr. J. G. Bosley reported that work had not been begun on his sidewalk in front of his residence on the Summit due to the contractors being unable to get materials. The contract, however, has been let.

John Allman reported that after large rains water came down from Big Hill avenue and practically flooded his slaughter house. Street Commissioner Allman was ordered to replace the present culvert with a larger one.

Reports from city officers showed that City Collector Dykes had received collections amounting to $4,414.67. Police Judge Murray Smith has imposed fines amounting to $540 and 30 days during the past month and Chief of Police Claude Devore has collected fines to the sum of $552.

Water was reported to have cut a deep gully at the corner of Second and Walnut streets and on a motion by McKinney, seconded by Crutcher, Street Commissioner Allman was ordered to make the necessary repairs.

A letter was received by the mayor from R. M. Barker, representative of the Burley Association, saying that in no other city was their receiving warehouse compelled to pay city license. The council did not feel that they should make one house have license and the other not so had the clerk to notify Mr. Barker that the money was due.

A letter was read from Fire Chief Daugherty saying that the department had received several calls in the last few days which were false alarms. He stated that every time the fire bell rings it costs the city at least $20 and that he wished the public would be sure to see that the blaze deserved the department's attention before the call was turned in. A letter was also received from the Department of Fire Prevention at Frankfort, inviting the Richmond fire chief to the state convention at Frankfort the first week in October.

The bill of E. W. Carson to the sum of $92.45 for collecting back taxes for the city was allowed.

On a motion by Councilman Hamilton, and seconded by Councilman Martin, the sewer committee will investigate the need of a sewer on Sunset avenue and report to the council at its next meeting.

Walnut street between B and Second streets was reported to need another coat of tar. This was referred to the street committee.

An ordinance was passed which calls for the property owners to chop all weeds in front of their property and in and on the sidewalks.

T. H. Collins and M. C. Kellogg came before the council in effort to get the extension of the Summit through to Lancaster avenue. Mr. Collins offered the city the right of way through his property and 1,000 tons of rock to be put on the street which is to run through his and the Walker heirs' property. It was decided to wait until the decision was handed down from the Court of Appeals as to whether the State Bank & Trust Co. has the right to sell the Walker property.

After the bills were allowed a motion to adjourn was carried.

Morgan Shuster, president of the Century Company, and a former diplomat, was found at a farm house north of here today by a crowd of relatives and volunteers who had been searching for her ever since Wednesday night. William Morris, 18, son of a Glasgow merchant, and a companion, Roger Dickinson, were also found at the same place. Morris and Miss Shuster, their statements indicated, intended to go to Nashville to be married. Their machine broke down. MOTHER'S METHODS ARE OUT OF DATE

(By Associated Press)
Chicago, Sept. 8.—Scientists will attempt to demonstrate that mother's methods in baking bread are out of date when the Bakery exposition and convention of national baker associations are held here September 11 to 16.

How modern scientific control has taken all chance and possibility of mishap out of what was once mother's "intuition" in getting a good bake of family bread will be shown at the exposition to be held on the municipal pier. Huge steel-armed bread mixers, each having the strength and working force of 200,000 women traveling ovens and other modern machinery will demonstrate the exactitude in the modern bake shop.

Progress of the baking industry in the last 15 years will be shown in machinery valued at more than $1,000,000 which will be in operation, turning out bread, pies and cakes, according to present day quantity production methods.

WHOLESALESA CAN COLLECT GAS TAX

(By Associated Press)
Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 8.—Kentucky gasoline wholesalers will be permitted to give bond to the state and continue to collect one cent a gallon gasoline tax, the State Tax Commission today told county clerks throughout the state. A letter rescinding the order to county clerks to collect tax from retailers has been mailed. The burden of proof, however, that the wholesalers paid tax will rest on the retailer, Chairman Wells later said.

BETTER EQUIPMENT IN FARM HOMES

Is Heart of Agricultural Problem of Kentucky, Says Expert T. R. Bryant

(By Associated Press)
Lexington, Ky., Sept. 7.—Better equipment in the farm homes of the state is the very heart of the agricultural problems existing in Kentucky today, in the opinion of T. R. Bryant, assistant director of the extension work at the College of Agriculture.

The statement was made in a discussion of the general purpose of extension work being carried on at the present time by the college. In attempting to show what the institution hopes to have accomplished a number of years from now, Mr. Bryant mentioned the following five matters merely as examples in addition to farm home improvement:

Less tendency, higher quality of products with standardized grades, more orderly methods of disposal, more co-operative effort and improved soils.

"There is no reason why the country woman should be penalized by being forced to live under conditions less favorable than those enjoyed by her sister who happened to marry a business man in the city," he said. "Two things are necessary to make the farm home comfortable, convenient and attractive place it should be. One is sufficient money to pay for the desired improvements even if these be very simple and inexpensive. The other and more fundamental necessity is that the occupants of the home get an idea, or in other words, a desire to improve the home, having an intelligent understanding of just what it is they want to do."

"In order to bring about less farm tenancy it will be necessary to show how to make farming profitable, which includes all the other points mentioned above and for that matter, several others. To be successful, a farmer must raise better livestock, must milk more profitable cows, must use only tested seeds and must use better business methods. All these things he can learn if once given an earnest desire."

"The fundamental problem is to inject into this tenant farmer the desire to own at least a small piece of real estate. The tenant moving from place to place is not particularly interested in the improvement of the community, the roads, the schools, the churches or the soil itself. He is not likely, therefore, to be a community asset, but is very likely to be a community burden."

"Products of higher quality refer to everything, from potatoes to beef cattle. At present we find quality indifferent, on the average, and there are few products whose grades are sufficiently standardized to place traffic between farmers and others on a very satisfactory basis, because the proposed purchaser does not know exactly what he is going to get."

"Regarding the most orderly disposal methods, we may enter the diversified subject of standardization, warehousing, shipping and merchandising, each a very great problem in itself. However, we cannot consider agriculture as being on a satisfactory basis until such problems and many others are properly solved."

"By co-operative effort, we refer to such undertakings as those mentioned under orderly methods of disposal, and in addition we refer to united efforts also has a place on matters of purchase and sales as well as the various social needs of the community."

"Improvement of soils must be made if we are really to go far with our agricultural improvement, because it would be futile to accomplish all the things mentioned above if by that time we find our soils still worse for wear. The soil being the basis of our agricultural prosperity, we must improve it from its present dilapidated condition and we must maintain the improvement which we secure."

PROMINENT SCOTT CO. MEN ARRESTED

For Alleged Attack On Show Man, Charged With Detaining Little Girl

Georgetown, Ky., Sept. 8.—J. R. Carrick and Lewis Finley were arrested and warrants were sworn out for Johnson Askew and R. C. Davis in connection with the alleged mob attack August 2 on Jack Eaton, circus concert player, after his release from the Scott county jail, where he had been placed under a warrant charging him with detaining a woman against her will.

Bond for each of the four men was granted in the sum of $500, which was furnished by Jeff Grover, president of the First National Bank of Georgetown, and father-in-law of Davis. The examining trials will be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock when evidence gathered by Sheriff Ollie McFarland and Deputy Ora Slater, of the Cal Crim Agency, Cincinnati, who was sent here by Gov. Morrow, will be presented.

Public sentiment has been running high and requests were made to Gov. Morrow to order a thorough investigation. Detective Slater's investigations have had as the principal object of determining whether or not Jailer Sam Moss knew that a mob was waiting when he released Eaton as has been reported, it is said.

Askew, father of Emily Askew, 8, to whom Eaton is alleged to have made improper advances, was with his wife, who is ill in the hospital, when the warrant was issued, but later came to the sheriff's office. He did not deny the charge in the warrant, which was for "being in a mob, taking part in and with a mob for the purpose of doing violence to one Jack Eaton, a person in the custody of the jailer, committed on or about the 29th day of August, 1922."

Askew is a well known farmer, Carrick, his brother-in-law, a wealthy farmer and race horse breeder, and Davis and Finley, who was former circuit clerk, are in the Penn Lumber Company.

Eaton was corner player for M. L. Clark's circus which exhibited here Tuesday, August 29. At noon on that day he was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Johnson Askew and lodged in Scott county jail. Askew swore the warrant after his little daughter, Emily, told him that while she was with Lavinia Davis, daughter of R. C. Davis, one of the men arrested, Eaton invited her to come over into some weeds by the roadside.

She began crying and as some persons were approaching the little girls were allowed to go on their way, she said. Eaton was kept in jail until about 9 o'clock when Jailer Sam Moss released him on a telephone order from County Judge J. B. Ward, who said that the parents of the little girls had requested the release in order to keep the two children out of court.

It is alleged that Eaton was seized outside the side door of the jail, taken seven miles out on the Turkeyfoot pike, horsewhipped and left at that place by his assailants. It is not known how he got away, as he was not seen in Georgetown again. Knowledge of the affair was never concealed, and reports were made to the governor and city and county officials.

Garland Johnson and John Ralston, farmers of Rogers Gap near where the alleged attack took place, turned over to Sheriff Ollie McFarland two red bandana handkerchiefs, a bottle of turpentine bearing a label which showed it had been purchased at Arnold's drug store in Georgetown, two pieces of knotted rope and an empty cigarette package. A bloody and muddy scarf was also found near the spot, and neighbors reported that dogs in the neighborhood barked excitedly all night.

REPORTS OF STRIKE

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Persistent rumors of impending peace of partial settlement of the railroad strike continued here today. The railroad executives, who commented on the rumors, denied knowledge of new proposals to end the strike and union leaders declined to lift the cloak of secrecy.

It was learned later that Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, is expected here this afternoon to meet a number of western railroad executives. It is understood they would attempt to reach separate agreements with the striking railroad shop crafts. Some shop craft leaders are reported in the city. Meanwhile B. M. Jewell, head of the federated shop crafts and two other union leaders appeared on the scene and were served with notice of the government's temporary injunction granted last Friday.

RED BERKSHIRE HOGS BECOMING POPULAR

County Clerk "Brother" Turley, local breeder of registered Kentucky Red Berkshire hogs, has made several nice sales within the last few days. This breed of hogs is spreading all over the state and the hogs are making names for themselves wherever they go. The latest sales of Mr. Turley are to R. T. Mayes, of Cammack, Ga., and E. J. Yoder, of Sugar Creek, O. These gentlemen have sent letters here to Mr. Turley praising his hogs. Most of them have been sold in the southern states but recently many have also been shipped to breeders in the northern states.

R. T. Bruce, of Stanford, another breeder of these hogs, was in Richmond court day and announced several nice sales. They are to Carl A. Longacre, of Augusta, O., W. B. Denney, of Smithfield, Pa., Brothers, of Danville, and W. K. Price, of Richmond.

Morrow Says Normal Location Is Political

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 8.—Asked whether he would conduct an investigation into the selection of Murray as the site for the new Western Kentucky State Normal School, Gov. Edwin P. Morrow said: "No request has come to me from any source for an investigation. At the very time the commission was provided or I very bitterly objected to it and when the democratic politicians changed the program of the administration for selecting the sites for the two normal schools it was understood by everybody that politics would be injected into it by these democratic politicians. And since it is a political matter I hesitate to institute an investigation before a demand is made upon me for one."

DEMOCRATS TO HELP CLAYHOLE VICTIMS

Action Taken At Louisville Meeting To Provide Defense For Convicted Men

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 8.—After several speakers had designated the Clayhole precinct, Breathitt county election fight of last November one of the most terrible episodes in the history of Kentucky, representative Democratic leaders of Jefferson and Fayette counties at a meeting at the Louisville Old Inn hotel adopted resolutions requesting the Democratic state central and executive committees to call a meeting at once to rally the Democrats of the state to the defense of the four election workers who are now appealing prison terms, and for the support of 8 women and 38 children made dependent by the battle.

Another resolution provided for a Jefferson county committee to begin work at once in soliciting contributions towards the $30,000 fund needed for the purpose in view.

Desha Breckinridge, Judge Samuel Wilson and Senator T. A. Combs, all of Lexington, were delegated to decide upon a group of five Democrats, representing the state at large, which will be a committee of program in presenting to Judge Charles A. Hardin, of Harrodsburg, chairman of the Democratic state central and executive committees, a statement of facts and setting forth the emergency need of action by the state committee.

Mr. Breckinridge said that the names will be furnished within the next day or so to James Garnett, of Louisville, who acted as chairman of the meeting. R. C. Musick, of Jackson, one of the attorneys for the four Democratic precinct workers tried and sentenced to prison as a result of the election fight, was detailed to draw up the statement to be made to Judge Hardin's committee and to the people of the state.

Surprise was expressed by several speakers at the general apathy of the people of Kentucky in the case, which John Skain, former mayor of Lexington, declared will be "an issue in the next election, from the governor down." He characterized the occurrence as having created the greatest stir since the Goebel murder and declared that in the coming election Kentucky must say "We will have no more murder in Kentucky; murderers must not go unpunished."

It was pointed out by Judge Wilson that the four men to be assisted—Leslie Combs, Shade Combs, French Combs and Geo. Allen, Jr.—were not tried for murder, but for "conspiracy to prevent an election." He further emphasized the fact that the men really were fighting to prevent a crime against the ballot; that they could not have been tried for murder because only one man on the other side was killed; and that the men who were tried and convicted actually were fighting to prevent the conspiracy being carried out.

"The people don't understand that these men were fighting a patriotic fight," Judge Garnett said, in seeking to explain the apathy of the public, to which frequent reference was made. "These men," he continued, "were fighting to protect the ballot. They did not conspire to prevent an election, because they were Democratic officers in a precinct overwhelmingly Democratic. But they got the worst of the judicial action and were railroaded to prison, while the real conspirators are walking at liberty about the country."

The meeting was attended, besides Messrs. Garnett, Skain, Breckinridge, Wilson, Combs and Musick, by Mark Beauhamp, of Louisville, who has been acting as treasurer of the temporary committee seeking to raise the funds here; Mrs. John L. Woodbury, Miss Jessie Bell, Lawrence Grauman, B. Hinton McCann, Pratt Dale, Lewis Humphrey and
